

Pin a Poem

Pin a poem to a tree and watch it catch the wind
Dip a brush and paint the greys
Till the colors run into every day
Take an oar, row unannounced to sea
And dance upon the dragon's breast
When all is dark forgetfulness

Outshine the sun and drown out all the rain
Love mists the mirror and brings us back again
Upstage the clown and stray beyond the wire
Run the extra mile and love will feed the fire

Give a king a paper crown and space upon a stage
Catch a thought and write it down
Fix the moment on a page
How the player turns the words around
But still the moving finger writes
And so the book is bound

Outshine the sun and drown out all the rain
Love mists the mirror and brings us back again
Upstage the clown and stray beyond the wire
Run the extra mile and love will feed the fire

Outshine the sun and drown out all the rain
Love mists the mirror and brings us back again
Upstage the clown and stray beyond the wire
Run the extra mile and love will feed the fire

Pin a poem to a tree

© Paul Johnson Rogers 1997